THE MORWELL HISTORICAL SOCIETY NEWS

Published every month except December.

The Society meets every 3rd Tuesday of the Month 7-30pm Collins St. State School Library

WELCOME TO THE SEPTEMBER NEWSLETTER

The Newsletter completes the 1896 Voters' Roll for the Shire of Morwell. In the July Newsletter, the roll included the name, McGaurin - entry number 255. In Mr Maddern's book, A Souvenir History of Morwell, reference is made to the McGauran family on page 15. In 1987, the family has been highlighted with entry in the Business Review Weekly's listing of the richest families in Australia. (The estimated minimum net worth is $50 million.) Also two McGauran brothers now represent the National Party in Federal politics. The Society may like to consider approaching the family for some history behind the family's rise to prominence.

Also, the Newsletter contains 2 articles from past copies of The Express. An advertisement for Cockle's Pills (a wonder medicinal) makes one wonder how we survive today.

FROM OUR AUGUST MEETING:

LATEST ON THE PALM TREES

Society member Eric Lubcke and Shire Parks and Gardens Curator, Gerry O'Connor have been checking possible sites for the relocation of the trees. The most likely one, subject to Council approval, is in the Lions park to the east of Morwell. This is close to the present position of the trees and would make them highly visible to travellers along the Prince's Highway.

BICENTENNIAL PLANS

There was discussion about the Society's possible contribution to the Bicentennial celebrations next year.

Two suggestions, put forward by Mrs. Jess Cafiso, were considered:

- 1) That the Society ask Miss Val Wilson to write a play or perhaps a series of sketches about pioneering life in Gippsland, to be performed during the Bicentenary.
- 2) That we put together a display of historical maps, photographs and documents with a co-ordinated commentary ie. people would be able to view the items in the display in order while listening to the recorded commentary.

It is hoped that the Morwell Bicentennial Committee will support these projects. However, if the Committee chooses not to be involved, we hope to undertake at least one of them ourselves.

Any further suggestions for our involvement in the Bicentennial celebrations will be most welcome.

NEXT MEETING

Tuesday, September 15th at Collins St. State School, Morwell.

ADVANCE NOTICE

It is proposed to hold our October Meeting at the Traralgon Library so that members and friends can view the newly acquired microfilm of the Morwell "Advertiser". The microfilm is held at the Traralgon Library because this is where the reader is located. More details in the October Newsletter.

THE original Church of England on the corner of Chapel and George Sts in Morwell. This photo was taken a few years after the construction of the church in 1885. Now the church is used by the Commercial Road Primary School as a gymnasium, as pictured below, among other things such as Mothers Club meetings, socials and films.

Still going strong after 100 years

A HUNDRED years on from the construction of the first Anglican church in Morwell sees the tiny wood and brick church used for something other than what it was intended.

place for the mothers club, for films and visiting groups and was the venue for the grade six social last year and the ballroom classes leading up to it.

No doubt our forefathers would not approve of its use as a gym but the building's high ceilings and length makes it ideal for jumping, running and climbing. Considering the extent of its use the building is in great shape with its original windows, roof, walls and most of the floor.

The church, set in the grounds of Commercial Rd Primary School in Morwell, is a well-used building that is regularly filled with the sound of laughing, screaming children, scenes far from the days when it was used for prayer.

The old church, built in 1885, is used by the school as a gymnasium, a meeting

The church building is owned by the Education Department and is currently being upgraded along with the rest of the Commercial Rd school. The school council passed a motion last year that the church building retain its original shape and that new fixtures must fit in with its period design.

The first church service of any denomination conducted in the Morwell area took place in June 1848 when Rev Francis Hales, on his way back to Melbourne after a three month touring ministration of Gippsland, held a service in the Bennett homestead at Hazelwood Station.

By 1878 Church of England services were being held monthly at Morwell in various buildings with the first Anglican Service in Morwell Village held in November 1878. When the Methodists built their church in 1883 it was also used by the Church of England and Presbyterian congregations.

The original St Mary's Church was built on the north-west corner block of George St at a cost of 330 pounds and was opened in December. Its official opening however was not until 1886 when it was blessed and officially opened by Bishop Moorhouse of Melbourne. Moves by the Church of England to build a church began in 1884 but little was done in the first 12 months.

It was not until railway contractor John Robb donated 25 pounds that the proposal got underway. When the church opened in 1885 100 pounds was still owing. From 1854 until 1865 the nearest Church of England centre was Sale. Then came the establishment of the Rosedale Parish in 1865, Traralgon Parish in 1878 and Morwell Parish in 1887.

The church and the site were taken over by the Education Department in the 1950's with the foundation of the new church in Latrobe Rd laid in 1959. From the outside the original church still looks the same, although a bit worn, and its site was originally a corner block on Chapel and George Sts.

School principal Mr Darell Blewett said old maps have shown that George St originally ran straight through where the school now stands. The old school was surrounded by a picket fence and a bell tower in the front yard with a narrow path leading to the small timber foyer of the church.

"Our grade six pupils undertake an outdoor project every year for the school and last year they decided to make a garden around the church. They hit concrete when they were digging and uncovered the original path," said Mr Blewett.

The school has also uncovered the foundation stone which was laid by Lord Bishop of Gippsland on December 9, 1908.

"We are looking at extending the altar area further out to make use of it as a stage and will have a ramp running up one side," said Mr Blewett.

Although more than 100 years old, the historic church has a modern role in the school life of pupils at Commercial Rd primary school and its proposed facelift means it will be in use for some time.

J. Pennycuik—a

WHETHER it was from a hunger for land or a sense of adventure, the vast majority of those who took up land in Gippsland bore names like Alexander, McArdle, McMillan, Stewart and Ross. In the town of Budgerie one of the first settlers was James Pennycuik, of Motherwell, near Glasgow, Scotland.

Somehow the history books have overlooked Pennycuik and most of our knowledge of him comes from a document he wrote in July 1932. The purpose of the document is not clear and the writing is hard to read but the story it tells is a fascinating one, offering a glimpse of the lengths to which our ancestors would go in order to establish themselves on land they could call their own.

long distance farmer

By John Wells

JAMES Pennycuik married Maggie Burnside, of Overtown, Scotland, on June 4, 1878, and spent the next five years running a business which belonged to his mother-in-law. His wife's brother, Michael Burnside, was in poor health and it was thought that the climate of New Zealand might benefit him. James, now 27 years old, accompanied Michael and his uncle, one Robert Millar. They took a train to Tilbury Docks and there boarded the steamship Iberia. Mrs Pennycuik and her family were left behind to mind the store.

The travellers made their first Australian landfall at Albany, Western Australia, and then came on to Adelaide and Melbourne. The SS Manapouri took them across the Tasman Sea to New Zealand. In that country they searched for a suitable property, finally buying a farm at Bluenose, about 16 kilometres from Dunedin. Pennycuik stayed there a few weeks, but as soon as Burnside and Millar were settled in he took the steamer Ringarooma from Lyttleton to Port Chalmers. The Doric took him back to London via Cape Horn and Rio de Janeiro. His Maggie met him at Law Junction and took him home to Overtown. He'd been absent about six months.

A few weeks later his mother-in-law decided to join her son in New Zealand so James escorted her to London, but she sailed without any companion on the British Queen. James went back to Overtown and spent the next two James Pennycuik was a Scottish farmer who came to New Zealand in 1878. He was married to Maggie Burnside. The document mentioned in the article is a letter from James to his mother-in-law, Mrs. Burnside, dated July 1932. It describes his life in New Zealand and his plans to return to Scotland. The letter is written in a very old-fashioned style and is difficult to read. It is a valuable historical document as it provides a first-hand account of the early days of Scottish settlement in New Zealand.

THIS is the first page of Pennycuik's document, written in July 1932. As you can see the writing is hard to read.

mother also lived on it. Pennycuik's family had grown in the meantime. Maggie, Willie and Minnie now mark their first appearance in his record.

IN 1893 the whole family boarded the Oceania in Melbourne and returned to Motherwell; only six or seven months later Pennycuik was headed back to Melbourne in the Oruba. This was in 1894.

years later with Maggie, running the business for Mr. Burnside and also working for James Barr, a commercial traveller. Eventually, and perhaps inevitably, they decided to emigrate to Australia.

Pennycuik sailed from Greenock with his wife, his son Thomas, his daughters Isabella and Janet, his brother Thomas and William Millar. They went via the Cape of Good Hope to Albany and then Hobart, then on to New Zealand and the farm at Bluenose.

James and Thomas Pennycuik, with Robert Millar, then sailed back to Melbourne by way of Hobart. The Pennycuiks never took short cuts! There they met 'Uncle Burnside'. They looked for work at Frankston but without success, then James found a job out John Duncan at Neerim. When that job ended Pennycuik, Millar and Burnside went to the Land Board at Traralgon, for land at Budgerie had been recommended to them. Millar and Pennycuik went on to Yinnar where they leased a paddock from W. H. Wicks, living in a hut belonging to him. This paddock they improved, then exchanged it for one behind the Yinnar Railway Station.

At this time Pennycuik returned to New Zealand to collect Maggie and the children, this being a common procedure. Many settlers left their families behind until they'd established a home, then they sent for the women and the children when the wilderness had been sufficiently tamed. It must have been a lonely business for all concerned.

IN 1886 he bought two blocks of land from Hicks (Wicks?) and built a house for his family. He then bought a farm across the Morwell River and rented out the Yinnar property to Thomas Walsh. The Burnside still in New Zealand then came to Budgerie to join Pennycuik.

During the period in which he was establishing the farm at Budgerie Pennycuik lived in Yinnar and travelled across the river whenever he had the time to spare. At about this time he was appointed manager of the butter factory, of which he was a director, for two years. When he resigned the other directors made him a present of 20 pounds and a framed testimonial.

He tried without success to sell the Budgerie farm but then placed it under the management of Archibald Burnside, Maggie's brother. Her

This was his business for 11 years until he moved onto another farm at Budgerie of 65 hectares. He was to stay on this farm for 25 years. It was from here that his son, Willie, left for the Great War. Willie died at Pozieres in 1916.

Before he moved back to the farm, in about 1906, Pennycuik again became a director of the butter factory. He was also the secretary for three years and finally the liquidator when the factory was sold to Wood and Company, of Melbourne.

IN one way and another he owned a good deal of land in the township at various times. He sold the house in Yinnar to a Mrs Donaldson of Morwell, a township block to Thomas Walsh, two blocks near the hotel, and the store, to John Moore, the original farm to Thomas Walsh and two blocks known as 'Deppeler's' and Yinnar' to the Closer Settlement Board. He also handed over Kelvin Grove, the farm he bought in 1906, to his son, James. Finally, he and his wife went to live at 'Bannockburn', the home of one of his daughters, married to R. J. Elliott.

Maggie Pennycuik died at 'Bannockburn' on October 10, 1931, and the document written by her husband closes with the rather sad lines: "I am still living here alone on the 30th July, 1932. I still retain the 277 hectares of land at Budgerie which I selected over 46 years ago."

WE know very little of James Pennycuik beyond what is recorded in his document. We do know that he made a successful application in 1905 for a school at Budgerie, in a room of his house. This date may suggest that he bought the Budgerie farm a little earlier than 1906, incidentally. In August 1908 the Education Department leased another, larger building from him. This was destroyed by fire in December of the same year but Pennycuik rebuilt it and the school reopened in March 1909. This was school No. 3504, Budgerie South East, which finally closed in 1954.

Little else seems to be known about Pennycuik. We might well wonder why a man of such ability and endeavor, and who played such a significant part in the growth of the district, should be nearly forgotten.

THIS is the second of a new history series by Gippsland historian, John Wells.

CELEBRATING A GREAT EVENT

Mr. I.T. Maddern
Morwell Historical Society News, 1962.

The first seven children of Zenna and John Rintoull (popular Morwell blacksmith) were all girls, but the eighth child was a boy, and the township really celebrated the great event. Flags were strung across the street, Mr. Fred Rollason was engaged to beat the big drum, and the editor of the local paper, Mr. Turnley, wrote and printed the following poem: (25th April, 1893) -

Bang the drum and blow the horn, away with every care,
Fill your glass and drink the health of Rintoull's son and heir.
The town can go insolvent, the banks may have a run,
And cattle may go down in price, but Rintoull's got a son.

You may talk about inventions of flying in the air,
Of gallant expeditions to find the Polar Bear,
They may be very startling, but this must take the bun,
Jack Rintoull is the father of a noble little son.

God bless his tiny offspring, and when he grows a lad,
We'll often hear his cheery voice as now we hear his dad.
Tug the blooming joy bells, for well they may be rung,
Hoist the flags aloft, Fred, for Rintoull's got a son.

Home Rule can go to Jericho, let Gladstone go to pot,
The Ulstermen can go to war and most of them be shot.
Jack Rintoull's gained a conquest, the victory is won,
And now he is the daddy of a sturdy little son.

The world may end for what we care, since we have lived to see
Jack Rintoull with a baby boy a-dangling on his knee.
What matter now how soon for us this earthly race is run?
The blooming universe can bust, for RINTOULL'S GOT A SON!

MICROFICHE AND MICROFILM

The Latrobe Valley Regional Library has added copies of the latest indexes for Victorian marriages and deaths, 1896 - 1913, to its microfiche collection.

These records, Births, marriages and deaths, 1835 - 1896, and marriages and deaths, 1896 - 1913, are available on request at Morwell Library. People wishing to use the microfiche should book ahead - each booking is for up to two hours.

The Library has also recently acquired microfilm of the Morwell "Advertiser" from 1886 - 1920, financed by a Bicentennial grant. Later copies of the paper are available only in Melbourne and then under very strict conditions.

The Latrobe Valley Regional Library Service is hoping to microfilm the remaining copies of the "Advertiser", to 1967, for use by Gippslanders, and is seeking donations and sponsorship to this end. Local organisations are being invited to sponsor the filming of a particular year or years, eg. a foundation year, or a year of particular significance to that organisation. Sponsorship for a year's microfilm is $110.00 but any donations will be gratefully accepted and can be left at any of the branches of the Library.

MONETARY MATTERS.

Remember the old pounds, shillings and pence - and halfpennies and farthings ?
Remember quid, bob, zac, deener, traybit, florin, half crown and guinea?

Here's a chance for the over-thirty-fives (and aren't we all?) to try their hands at some pre-decimal addition. If you can find the correct amount to write beside each clue, the total will be £18-2-3.

 Warning! Don't take the clues too literally (or too seriously).
